Old Pueblo Archaeology Center’s executive director, archaeologist Allen Dart, leads this tour to two of the Tucson area’s premier pre-European archaeological sites. The tour will meet at Los Morteros and caravan from there to Picture Rocks.

Los Morteros, an ancient village site of the Hohokam Indians from about 850 to 1300 CE, has been studied by archaeologists and historians for more than a century. During its heyday it was the center of an extended community of related Hohokam sites along the Santa Cruz River. The core of Los Morteros, which is now preserved in a Pima County natural and cultural resources park, encompasses a large public architectural feature interpreted as a ballcourt used for ritual and other purposes, plus many refuse mounds, room blocks, hundreds of pithouses, and thousands of artifacts. Bedrock mortars (which inspired the site’s name – Los Morteros is Spanish for “The Mortars”) and petroglyphs also are present.

The Picture Rocks site in the Tucson Mountains foothills contains hundreds of ancient rock symbols, made mostly by the Hohokam, although some of the rock designs may predate 500 CE. The symbols at Picture Rocks include dancing human-like figures and whimsical animals as well as abstract designs. At least some of the petroglyphs evidently were ritually important, as evidenced by the observation that at least one of them is a marker for both equinoxes and the summer solstice of each year. An equinox calendar petroglyph at the site exhibits a specific interaction with a ray of sunlight on the morning of each equinox regardless of the hour and minute of the actual celestial equinox, so participants in this tour will see the sunlight interact with the calendar glyph if clouds do not block the sunlight on the tour day.

Tour attendance is limited because the Picture Rocks site is on a religious retreat property where silence and meditation are important.
