Some projectile points made by the WORKSHOP INSTRUCTOR: SAM GREENLEAF

In this 3-hour workshop Old Pueblo's expert flintknapper Sam Greenleaf demonstrates and teaches how to make arrowheads and spear points out of obsidian and other kinds of stone.

Sam provides insights on how ancient peoples made and used stone tools, and provides hands-on experience in making and recognizing flaked stone artifacts.

Obsidian stone and all needed tools are provided.

Limited to six participants.

Children under age 16 may enroll only if parent or guardian also enrolls in the class.

Register for this workshop to get hands-on instruction in how to:

- Produce a flaked stone tool using a hammerstone to break a desired size of flake off of a core of rock.
- Thin and shape the flake into a projectile point or other stone implement, using an antler tool.
- Finish the artifact using fine pressure flaking.

This activity is designed to help modern people understand how early peoples made and used tools. It is not intended to train people how to make crafts for sale.

SAM DOESN'T HAVE AN AX TO GRIND. HE HAS A POINT TO MAKE!
